Perceval, Spencer. Papers, 1806-1809. London, England. . . . 4 items. Sketch.

This collection contains material that relates to Spencer Perceval, British statesman (1762-1812). On Sept. 15, 1806, Perceval writes about his involvement with the secret inquiry into the conduct of Carolina Amelia Elizabeth, Princess of Wales. In two letters John Morrison seeks the post of envoy to Delhi, India. He criticizes the role of the East India Co. and suggests the assumption of authority by the crown. One letter is addressed to Perceval and the other to Robert Dundas Saunders, president of the commission for Indian affairs.

1 item added, 3-20-61. A letter (May 21, 1801) from Perceval involves the appointment of a local postal official.

1 item added, 9-12-61. On May 22, 1807, Perceval, Chancellor of the Exchequer, invites Edward Law, First Baron Ellenborough, Chief Justice of the King's Bench, to a formal dinner. He stresses that this procedure is a customary one, and he lists other persons on the guest list who also do not support the Ministry.

Perceval, Spencer

1 item added, 4-5-66. In October, 1809, Spencer Perceval became prime minister. On Oct. 11, Robert Dundas, Irish Secretary in the preceding administration, wrote to Perceval while traveling from Dublin to London. He reported on Sir John Anstruther's attitude and other matters relating to the formation of the cabinet. Dundas became President of the Board of Control.

1 item added, 9-16-70: Perceval's letter of June 3, 1811, to Richard Hart Davis, M. P., concerned communications from General

Perkins, Mary Sarah (Bell), Papers. Lynchburg, Va., and Upper Montclair, N. J.

This collection is comprised of a typescript of the diary of Mary Sarah (Bell) Perkins, wife of William Robertson Perkins, and of photographs of paintings by Douglas Chandor of the Perkinses, and of a photograph of Thomas Benjamin Moore Perkins, father of W. R. The paintings and photograph are in the possession of Mrs. Clark N. Barton of El Dorado, Arkansas. See also the William Robertson Perkins Papers in this department.

Mrs. Perkins' diary runs from January 1, 1932, to June 23, 1941. There is no indication as to why it stopped on that date. Each entry in the diary is brief and factual and seldom mentions a public event. The entries usually begin with a comment on the weather and continue with mention of the Perkins children, some of their activities, births of grandchildren, frequent visits from and with their three children, grandchildren, and friends. Their children were William R. Perkins, Jr., Thomas Lee, and Mary Clough. According to the genealogy compiled by William R. Perkins that is in his collection in a folder labeled "Ancestors and Descendants," William R., Jr. married Mrs. Margaret Kaye Wynne-Wynne, Thomas married Dorothy Morgan, and Mary married Charles Nylic Barton, son of Col. Thomas H. Barton, founder and president of the Lion Oil Company of El Dorado, Ark.

Mrs. Perkins usually mentioned her guests

and bridge-playing friends only by their surnames. For example, she always referred to her close friend Mrs. David Henney as Mrs. Henney. She referred to her husband as Mr. Perkins, Dad, or Papa. The Perkinses maintained an apartment in New York, and frequently Mrs. Perkins would write that her husband had remained in the city for the night, or that he had worked late, or was on a trip to North Carolina, Washington, or elsewhere. As a member of the legal staff of the American Tobacco Company until it was dissolved, then counsel for the P. Lorillard Company, personal counsel of James B. and Benjamin N. Duke, executor and trustee of their estates, and thereby involved in the building of Duke University, and head of the firm of Perkins, Daniels & Perkins, he doubtless was an exceedingly hardworking attorney.

The diary entries of Mrs. Perkins also mention shopping, social, cultural, and church activities, trips, and gardening while she lived in New York state and New Jersey. Once the Perkinses moved in 1937 to a farm, which they named "Rocklawn," eleven miles out of Lynchburg on the Holcomb Rock Road leading to Natural Bridge her entries frequently recorded helping the cook with preserving and canning, work being done on the farm, and landscaping the yard. The social activities she frequently spoke of were usually visits by relatives and friends and men associated with Duke University and The Duke Endowment. She reported no conversations with their guests.

Some specific diary entries are as follows:
Oct. 20, 1932, W. R. Perkins delivered an address to the Bar Association at Duke; Nov. 8, 1932, the Perkins family all voted for Herbert Hoover; on Nov. 30, 1932, the Perkinses celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary; Jan. 18, 1934, Mrs. Perkins went to see the Meister-singer for the benefit of the Southern Women's Educational Alliance; June 2, 1934, Mr. Perkins went to Spartanburg to deliver the Commencement address at Wofford College; Jan. 7, 1935, Mrs. Perkins attended a meeting at Mrs. Hagemeyer's of the Southern Women's Educational Alliance; Apr. 9, Mr. Perkins spoke at Davidson College; June 2 he attended Commencement at Duke; Sept. 19, David Henney died; Jan. 25, 1936, "Al Smith delivered a fine radio address"; Sept. 3, Mr. Perkins went to Durham to attend the funeral of Mrs. Benjamin Newton Duke; Feb. 11, 1937, the Perkinses moved from Montclair to "Rocklawn"; Feb. 11, 1938, Mr. Perkins won the

P. Lorillard case; June 24, Alfred, the chauffeur, drove Mrs. Perkins to Durham for the wedding of Mary Biddle and Dr. Josiah C. Trent which is described briefly; Apr. 21, 1939, Mr. Perkins drove to Durham for the opening of the Centennial of Duke University; June 8, Thomas L. Perkins graduated from the Law School of the University of Virginia with high marks. The record from 1937 to 1941 of the relationship between the Perkinses and Mary Biddle Trent, granddaughter of B. N. Duke, and her first husband, Dr. Trent, reveals a close friendship between them.

In summary the diary of Mrs. Perkins is a portrayal in outline of life within her family after the Perkins children are grown, the absorption of her husband for his profession, and of her life style as an upper middle class woman.

Perkins, William Robertson. Papers. Lynchburg, Campbell Co., Va., and New York, N.Y.

Judge William Robertson Perkins (1875-1945), counsel for James Buchanan Duke, executor of his will, and Trustee of the Duke Endowment, is represented by a letter on the relation of a university (Duke) and its president (W. P. Few) to students. This copy comes from an original letter to Judge Perkins to be found in the William Preston Few Papers.

In the settlement of Item IV of the will of

James B. Duke, a major role was played by Judge Perkins as executor. His son, Thomas L. Perkins, sent to the Perkins Library a clipping from the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger, Oct. 10, 1928, in which Judge Perkins and Charles Evans Hughes are pictured during the final hearings on the settlement of the Duke estate under Item IV. In the James Buchanan Duke Papers are many letters and legal papers concerning the court battles in this settlement.

See the article on Perkins in the Duke Alumni Register (1942), p. 269.

Ca. 5,704 items & 5 vols. added, 3-24-82:
When this large addition, primarily 1920s and 1930s, was added to the collection, the small original collection of three items was incorporated into the category, Perkins, William R. - Miscellaneous Papers. (See sketch in Inventory File.) The sketch was then rewritten on the following cards.

William Robertson Perkins (1875-1945), attorney, practiced law in New York City for forty years. After a boyhood and early years as an attorney in Lynchburg, Virginia, he became, in 1913, personal legal counselor to James B. Duke and the Duke families. Perkins was a member of the law firm of Perkins and Daniels, which later became Perkins, Daniels, and Perkins when Perkins' son Thomas L. joined the firm. He drew the wills of James B. and Benjamin N. Duke and acted as executor of both their estates. Perkins' business connection with the Duke interests kept him in close touch with the affairs of Duke University. He drafted the indenture for the Duke Endowment and then served as trustee and vice chairman of the Endowment. As a result of his link with James B. Duke, Perkins was active in hydroelectric power development in Canada. He was both a director and counselor to the American Cyanamid Company, and also served as a director and vice president of the Duke

Power Company in the Carolinas. Further biographical information is contained in Box 1.

The Alphabetical Files comprise the entire collection of thousands of legal papers (1903-1945) representing state and federal tax litigation of the Duke families, the George D. Haskell suit against the Aluminum Company of America, and the Haskell suit against the Duke estate. Note that several suits were carried on simultaneously in separate state and federal courts, thus there appear to be overlapping,

There are estate tax litigation papers for Angier, Benjamin, Doris, James, and Nanaline Duke from eight states and the federal government (Boxes 1-11). Particularly detailed to show the Duke family holdings in stocks and bonds are the New Jersey, New York, and federal estate tax cases (1925-1934), which involved the Doris Duke trust, Duke Farms Company (a personal holding company which James Duke organized), and the Duke Power Company (Boxes 6-7).

On July 13, 1931, there was a decision for the Duke estate before the U.S. Board of Tax Appeals, which the Board appealed. Perkins then won the Duke estate federal tax case in the 3rd Circuit Board of Appeals on January 10, 1933. The Board took the case to the U.S. Supreme Court. Finally, and again under Perkins' leadership, on October 23, 1933 federal taxes of $9,000,000 assessed against the Duke estate were disallowed by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The ALCOA Chronology file (Box 11) is a guide to most of the events leading to the Haskell suits against ALCOA (Boxes 11-20). George D. Haskell, a small businessman from Massachusetts, claimed that there was a joint venture with James B. Duke in early 1924 to establish an aluminum enterprise on the Sangue-nay River in Quebec, that Duke broke this agreement by "selling out" to ALCOA, and that the Haskell suit was an attempt to recover for gains from Duke. Haskell alleged he would have made these gains had his agreement with Duke been realized. The Haskell suit for $15 million damages against the Duke estate began in 1926 in a New Jersey District Court and ended in the U.S. Supreme Court in favor of the Duke estate in 1929 (Boxes 20-21). Throughout the litigation teams of lawyers were guided by the counsel of Perkins from either New York or Lynchburg.

Evident throughout the papers is the business acumen of James B. Duke, Perkins, George Garland Allen, Arthur Vining Davis, George D.

Haskell, and William States Lee. Many of their signed letters are included. Also in the papers are newspaper articles in 1925 on James B. Duke's proposed extension of the Piedmont & Northern Railway from Charlotte to Winston-Salem, as well as on building the connecting link between Gastonia and Spartanburg, South Carolina, a matter which would cost from twelve to fifteen million dollars (Box 7).

Included in the Perkins files (Boxes 22-25) at the end of the collection are his early cases with the British-American Tobacco Company and the P. Lorillard Company litigation. Also, a volume consists of an "Abstract of Title to the Proposed Site of the Jamestown Exposition." This abstract was presented to Judge Perkins in 1938 in a silver canister. The abstract is signed by Theodore J. Wool and O.D. Batchelor, General Counsel for the Jamestown Exposition Company, and dated March 10, 1904. With the abstract is Wool's letter to Perkins on April 18, 1938, in which he reveals that Perkins had compiled the abstract and that it had been preserved by Wool since the close of the Exposition in 1907. A signed copy of Perkins' reply also appears in the collection.

Also in the Perkins files are papers of a personal nature such as an itemization of Perkins' estate in two ledgers as well as a detailed genealogical study of his ancestors and descendants from 1656 to 1943. Other volumes are leather-bound memorial resolutions adopted in memory of Judge Perkins by the

American Cyanamid Company, the Duke Endowment, Duke Power Company, and P. Lorillard Company. These resolutions contain much biographical information.

Since this collection has not been cataloged in detail, the entries made for the Autograph file may be incomplete. Only general subject entries have been made for the collection. An inventory of the collection is filed in the first box.

Perrin, Thomas C. Papers, 1822-1895.
Abbeville, S. C. 632 items. Sketch.

Correspondence of Thos. C. Perrin, lawyer, state senator, Confederate soldier, and pres. of the Greenville and Columbia R. R., dealing largely with his legal practice as partner of Jas. S. Cothran, a state judge and member of the U. S. House of Repres., his speculation in cotton, suits against the Greenville and Columbia R. R., and affairs of the Presbyterian Church in S. C.

In the 1850's, Perrin and Cothran, and in the 1870's, Quarles and Perrin were speculating in cotton. There are many letters and reports from cotton brokers and speculators in Charleston--McGowan and Perrin, Jeffers & Cothran, Geo. A. Trenholm and Son, and others, and some reports from N. Y. cotton brokers. Many of the legal papers relate to cases against the Greenville and Columbia R. R. There is some correspondence in the fifties with Wm. S. Cothran, father of Jas. S. Cothran, who was pres. of the Rome R. R. Co. There are plats of surveys of land belonging to the estate of Henry Laurens; printed material regarding suits involving the Ga., Carolina, and Northern R. R.; and papers of L. W. Perrin, attorney for the latter R. R.

Thos. C. Perrin was also a very prominent member of the Presbyterian Church in S. C. and was for many years pres. of the Society for the Relief of Indigent and Superannuated Ministers of the Synod of S. C. Several items deal with the Long Cane Presbyterian Church of Abbeville county. The correspondents include:

Perronet Family. Papers, 1752-1855. Shoreham,
Kent, England

This collection consists principally of a scrapbook including correspondence, reproductions of engravings, poetry, autographs, a pencil drawing, and an account of astrological incidents.

The correspondence contained in the scrapbook is related to the Perronet family and other early leaders of the Wesleyan movement in England. There are seven letters from Vincent Perronet, a Wesleyan minister, to his children and grandchildren. In a letter to his granddaughter, Charity Briggs, Perronet stated his doctrine of the atonement (p. 5). He wrote his son Charles and daughter Damaris and compared self-discipline with the discipline a minister must exercise over his congregation (p. 7). In a second letter to them he told of an incident in which a Wesleyan was denied the sacrament at an Anglican church (p. 9). His other letters concern family matters and advice to his children on such issues as dancing and social conformity.

Perronet Family.

A letter possibly written by John Perronet, son of Vincent Perronet, discusses the philosophy of John Locke (p. 21). The writer of this letter defended Locke's views against the attacks of John Hildrop, an Anglican clergyman, and Robert Clayton, Anglican Bishop of Cork and Ross and later Bishop of Clogher.

The scrapbook also contains three letters from John Wesley to the Rev. Peard Dickinson, a Wesleyan minister who married Elizabeth Briggs, granddaughter of Vincent Perronet (p. 23). Wesley argued against the practice of consecrating ground for burial plots. He also indicated his hopes for maintaining and strengthening the ties between the Dickinson and Wesley families. In a second letter Wesley discussed the spiritual life of Sammy Wesley. He also mentions that though his eyesight remained impaired, his health had generally improved (p. 25). The third letter is a letter of condolence to Dickinson concerning the death of a member of Dickinson's family (p. 27).

In a letter to William Perronet, Vincent Perronet's son, Charles Wesley encouraged young

Perronet to practice daily devotions (P. 33). Wesley later wrote Perronet a letter in which he discussed their mutual acquaintances and his poor health (p. 31). He mentioned his health again in a letter to Betsy Briggs (Elizabeth Briggs Dickinson) and discussed the meaning of death (p. 35).

Sarah Wesley wrote Mrs. Dickinson about the merits of liturgical simplicity and the superficiality of elaborate ritual (p. 85).

In three letters to Dickinson, Joseph Benson, a leading Wesleyan minister, considered the problems besetting English Methodists during the years just following the death of John Wesley in 1791. He noted that he had gained much from reading Joseph Milner's History of the Church of Christ and that though he understood that the Christian Church has chronically been troubled by internal disagreement, he could nevertheless feel discouraged about the situation obtaining in the Methodist Church in England (p. 65). He later saw some hope for an agreement (p. 67), but a few months afterward he stated that he doubted if the

English Methodist groups would ever be united
(p. 69).

Letters of numerous other Methodist leaders are also contained in the scrapbook. In a letter to an unidentified friend, Adam Clarke discussed the English edition of Christoph Christian Sturm's Reflections on the Works of God and His Providence which he had edited (p. 83). Included in this letter is a draft of the advertisement for the new edition. Other letters relating to the Perronet family or British Methodism are by the Wesleyan

There are engravings of John Wesley (p. 22), Vincent Perronet (p. 3), and Joseph Benson (p. 65) and a pencil drawing of William Perronet (p. 13). An account, presumably written by Vincent Perronet, describes two mysterious appearances of a bright star soon followed by deaths in the community (p. 19). Several poems are included (pp. 2,3,18, and loose), as is a printed version of the last words of Charles Wesley (p. 31). An undated newspaper clipping gives an obituary notice and short biography of Edith Thompson, great-great-granddaughter of Vincent Perronet.

Among the loose items are a short discourse on man's need for religious conversion, which, according to Vincent Perronet, was written by his son Charles; two diaries kept by an unidentified young lady who commented on sermons, prayer meetings, her spiritual development, and the daily life of a devout family; and

This material consists chiefly of indentures and other legal documents, together with a few letters. The family apparently resided in Franklin County as early as the Revolutionary period. Most of the information concerning the family is provided in the will of Jeremiah Perry (1838). Therein he left 83 slaves and a unknown quantity of land to his wife, Temperance, and their ten children, Nathan, Bennett, addition to this each of the children had,

Various members of the family figure in the documents. The scattered evidence, though, leads to the conclusion that the family were large planters, with, probably,

Historical Sketch

Perry was born in Pendleton District in 1805, and died at Greenville, S. C. in 1886. He was educated at Asheville, N.C., and was admitted to the bar in 1827. His bold attack through the Greenville Mountaineer made him a leader of the Union Party in S.C. From 1836-1844 he was in Congress where he diligently labored for the Union cause. In 1850 he established the Southern Patriot and through it appealed to the South Carolinians to remain loyal to the Union. When S. C. withdrew in 1861, he sent his sons to the Confederate army. In 1865 he was appointed provisional governor.

The letters of this collection are addressed to Armistead Burt of Abbeville, S.C. The sequestration of property in 1863, the formation of Civil Rights Bills, and private law suits are discussed in the letters.

Perry, Thomas Sergeant Sketch (1)

The life of Thomas Sergeant Perry (1845-1928), a minor American critic, covers almost the identical span of years with that of the great English critic, George Saintsbury (1845-1933) and of the novelist Thomas Hardy (1840-1928). In our own country, he was a few years younger than his close friends, William Dean Howells and Henry James. Thus he lived and wrote letters from the middle years of the Victorian period, or from the pre-Civil war years through the swift political and literary upheavals of the 1920's. The letters which have been microfilmed for this collection begin with the boyhood letters sent by Henry, William, and Wilkinson James from Europe in the years 1859-1860, and conclude with letters written by Perry to Van Wyck Brooks and to his son-in-law, the distinguished ambassador, Joseph C. Grew, in the last years of Perry's life. For an account of Perry's life, one may consult the D.A.B. article written by Edwin Arlington Robinson, the Memoir by John T. Morse, Jr., or the preface to Selected Letters of Thomas Sergeant Perry, edited by E.A. Robinson.

This collection of letters is valuable, not only because it covers such a long span of years, but because Perry's interests ranged widely in the fields of art, music, politics, and travel, as well as in his particular field of literature, both American and European. He knew the society of Boston and of Cambridge over a period of nearly seventy years (1860-1928), belonging to one of the most notable dining clubs of the city from the time of its organization in 1870 until the year of his death. The letters also give pictures of Newport, where he spent his youth, and of Philadelphia, where he made frequent visits to his mother and his sister. In addition to his residence in Boston, he lived for considerable periods in ^{Europe, chiefly in} France - 1866-1868, 1887-1889, 1891, 1894-1897, and 1905-1909 - and he spent three years in Japan, where he taught in the Keio ~~gijuku~~ University. During each of these foreign residences he made many friends and he wrote fully about his observations of people and customs and events. His wife, Lilla Cabot Perry, was an artist of distinction, and through her he became acquainted with artists and art movements in Boston, Paris, and Giverny, the home of Claude Monet. After his return to this country in 1909, he spent his summers on a farm near Hancock, New Hampshire, which is only a few miles from the fashionable resort of Dublin and from the MacDowell art colony of Peterborough. Friends from these two places as well as from Boston were frequent guests at ~~the~~ Hancock farm, notable among them being the poet Edwin Arlington Robinson, whose visits began in 1913 and continued until 1927.

The letters of this collection fall into rather well defined groups, covering the pre-college and college days (1859-1870), the life in Boston and Cambridge when Perry was contributing to magazines, teaching at Harvard, and writing his volumes of critical work (1870-1887); the years of travel and foreign residence (1887-1909); and the final years in Boston and Hancock (1909-1928).

For the first of these periods there are about fifteen letters written chiefly by Henry James to Perry telling of the school life and studies of himself and his brothers in Geneva, Switzerland, and in Bonn, Germany, and there are a few written by and to Perry during his college days in Harvard. After his graduation, he spent the years 1866-1868 travelling and studying in Europe, and for this period there is one diary in addition to the numerous letters from his friend Moorfield Storey, who was at first a student in the Harvard Law school and later secretary to Charles Sumner in Washington during the impeachment proceedings against President Johnson. There are also a few letters written in the '70's to Perry by his cousin, Miss Agnes Irwin, later to become dean at Radcliffe college. For the years 1873-1874 there are about fifty letters written by John R. Dennett, a brilliant young editor of the Nation under L.L. Godkin. These relate to Perry's contributions to that magazine and to other contributors to the New York periodical. For the later '70's there is a scattering of letters from Henry James, who had gone to Europe in 1875; and from Mrs. Helen Choate Bell, the gifted daughter of the famous orator and lawyer, Rufus Choate, and the life-long friend of Mrs. Perry. Mrs. Bell considered Mr. Perry her literary adviser, and wrote sometimes about books, and sometimes about personal affairs.

Perry, Thomas Sergeant

Sketch

For the early '80's there is a group of letters written to Moorfield Storey, then an Overseer of Harvard College and a rising young lawyer, about Perry's difficulties at Harvard college, where he had been tutor in French and German from 1868-1872 and instructor in English from 1878-1881. In the winter of 1882 Perry gave a course of lectures on English literature in Philadelphia, and during the five or six weeks of his residence there, he wrote daily to Mrs. Perry, telling of the people he was meeting and of his studies in the libraries. His mother was a great grand-daughter of Benjamin Franklin, and his sister was married to Dr. William Pepper, ^{Professor} of the University of Pennsylvania Medical School. Among the distinguished people whom he met at this time were President Gilman of the Johns Hopkins University, the classicist B.L. Gildersleeve, and the philologist Wm. Dwight Whitney. There are also a few letters of the '80's from Henry James in England, and from John Addington Symonds, the English critic.

In the late '80's began the voluminous correspondence which Perry carried on with his friend, Hercules Warren Fay, the now forgotten contributor to the Nation, the New York Post, and other periodicals.

Fay, who was an invalid from 1858 until his death in 1899 was keenly interested in current writings, chiefly in the French. Perry wrote to him almost daily, sharing his aversions and his admirations with equal enthusiasm. They exchanged opinions on Perry's books, which were being published in this decade, on the works of Dostoieffski, Diderot, Zola, Flaubert, Cherbuliez, and other foreign writers; they wrote of John Fiske, who was an intimate and beloved friend of both of them, of Howells, Brownell, C.D. Warner, and other American writers. During Perry's years in Europe he sent to Fay accounts of the French periodicals which he was reading, and frequently he dispatched bundles of these papers from which Fay might get suggestions for his own contributions to American periodicals. The letters of this period also contain accounts of Perry's travels in Spain, Italy, and Germany, where he visited the chief picture galleries of each country; accounts of the summer residence in Giverny, where the family lived as neighbors to the artist Claude Monet; accounts of the political disturbances in Paris during the sudden rise and no less sudden fall of Boulanger; and accounts of Perry's friendship with Alexandre Beljame, lecturer at the Sorbonne on English literature, Salomon Reinach, French archaeologist, and Leopold von Schroeder, German Sanskrit scholar and student of religions.

many of the letters written during the second European residence ⁽¹⁸⁹⁴⁻¹⁸⁹⁷⁾ were addressed to John T. Morse, Jr., editor of the American Statesman Series of biographies and biographer of his eminent cousin, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes. Again the Perrys visited the art galleries and the homes in Spain, a country for which Morse had a particular fondness. In Paris in 1895 Perry attended a banquet given in honor of Puvis de Chavannes, and one given to Edmond Goncourt, and he tells of the famous men whom he saw on these occasions. In Giverny he renewed his acquaintance with the artist Monet and with the other members of the art colony there. The letters written to Fay during these years discuss the periodical literature of both Europe and America, the politics of the Cleveland and McKinley administrations, the doings in Boston in the Public Library, the Art Museum, and in the society and politics of the city.

After a few months of social activity in Boston from late in 1897 till May, 1898, Perry went to Japan to teach in the Keiogiōjuku University, where he remained until the summer of 1901. His letters during this period are addressed to his mother, Mrs. Frances Sergeant Perry, of Philadelphia, and to Morse and Moorfield Storey. As would be expected, he writes of the people and their ways and peculiar characteristics, of the scenery, the volcanoes and earthquakes; he tells of the mountain resort at Karuizawa, of the cosmopolitan society of the foreign legations;

he recommends books about Japan, discusses the Spanish-American war, and the problem of the Philippine annexation and the Dreyfus affair as it went on in Paris. By the middle of the summer of 1900 disturbances in China were sending missionaries and other Occidentals to Japan for safety, and the Russo-Japanese war was threatening before he left the country in 1901. With all of his interests in Japan, he never lost sight of political events in the United States, and he makes frequent references to McKinley, Roosevelt, Lodge, Bryan, and others.

After his return to America in 1901, he spent four years in this country. The letters of this period throw some light upon the interests of The Club, of which Perry had been a member since its formation in 1870, and which counted among its members William and Henry James, William Dean Howells, Raphael Pumpelly, Henry Adams, Henry L. Higginson, and John T. Morse, Jr., and Moorfield Storey. In his comments on political events, he expresses his admiration for the courage of Storey's "incendiary articles" and "treasonable speeches," for Storey was a leader in the anti-Imperialist movement and an advocate of complete equality of the negro with the white man. There are a few entertaining letters describing the trip with Storey to Charleston, South Carolina, for the Commencement address before the College of Charleston, expressing admiration for Southern hospitality; there are letters describing Perry's feelings about the Hancock farm life and the people of New Hampshire; and throughout there are constant expressions of his literary enthusiasms, chief among which were Mr. Dooley, George Bernard Shaw, Friedländer's Sittengeschichte Roms, Rhodes's History of the United States, Merz's History of European Thought in the XIXth Century, and his friend Reinach's Cultes, Mythes et Religions.

After the marriage of Miss Alice Perry to Joseph Grev in September, 1905, the family made their last pilgrimage to Europe, this time for a stay of four years. The letters of these years are mostly addressed to John T. Morse, Jr. and they discuss a wide range of books, magazines, and newspapers, including references to Dostoievski, Ibsen, Schopenhauer, LeBon, Ferret, and numerous other authors; contacts with Bel, Reinach, Von Schroeder in Paris and Germany, and with the artist Monet in Giver-ny. There is an account of a visit to Henry James in New York in 1906, of a trip to Russia, where Joseph Grew held a diplomatic post in 1906, and of a ~~summer~~ spent in Prague. There are reports of visits to Paris of Barrett Wendell, James Ford Rhodes, Henry James, Mr. and Mrs. Bellamy Storer, and Hamlin Garland. In this section of the collection are also included typed copies of letters gathered together by Mrs. Storer and giving evidence of President Roosevelt's duplicity in bringing about Storer's resignation from his diplomatic post at Vienna. There are also reports of the Paris ~~revolution~~ ^{disorder} of February, 1906, of disturbances in Boston, of the affairs of the Boston Public Library and of the Boston Art Museum, and comments on three of the Europeans who gave Lowell lectures in Boston: Colonel Scott-Moncrieff, Tardieu, and Ferrero.

In 1909, when Perry returned to America at the age of sixty-four, he had spent nine out of the preceding 23 years in Europe and three in Japan. It is not surprising, therefore, to find him violently opposed to Roosevelt's strenuous Americanism, to Bryan's demagoguery, and most of all to Wilson's steady insistence upon neutrality. These three leaders kept him in an almost constant state of indignation during the second decade of the century. He constantly opposed the high tariff measures, lamented the evils of a democracy that was sure to level down, and during the 1920's, when wealth was accumulating, he felt abhorrence for the connection between wealth and vulgarity of taste. During the war years, he took great satisfaction in the first-hand reports of the war sent to him from Berlin by his son-in-law, Joseph Grew, and he read with eagerness the Berlin diary which Mr. Grew kept at his ^{recommendation.} ~~insistence~~. Perry, who had been a leader in the movement for realism in fiction in the 1870's, always placed the highest value on factual accuracy, and on the intelligent interpretation of facts. In addition to the diaries of Mr. Grew, he had frequent letters from Salomon Reinach in France, and he praised in his own letters the diary of the war years which Reinach later published as La Chronologie de la guerre. As might be expected, Perry also told in his letters some of the stories of German atrocities which came to his ears, and likewise the reports of the excellent records of the American soldiers in France.

He felt extreme concern over the pro-German sympathizers during the period of "neutrality," among whom were Hugo Munsterberg of Harvard, and his two friends, Bellamy Storer and James F. Rhodes. The letters which he wrote after the conclusion of the war tell with warrantable pride of the part that Grew played at the signing of the peace of Versailles and at the Locarno conferences. He was a vigorous supporter of the League of Nations and steadily urged the cancellation of the war debts.

The Prohibition amendment and the Suffrage amendment he vigorously denounced. In fact he found little to admire in the political movements of the 1920's, less even than in the post-Civil war days. He was greatly agitated by the effort to free Sacco and Vanzetti from what he considered their just punishment for crime. In fact, he felt that the criminal courts were themselves criminal in their failure to impose punishment upon offenders.

Perry's letters make a considerable contribution to the history of Harvard college over the period from 1864 to 1928, and particularly during these late years of his life there are frequent comments on the college affairs. Since the grievous blow that he had received from President Eliot in his dismissal from a teaching position in 1881, he was little disposed to see any good in Eliot's policies. But apart from this personal grievance, he was temperamentally disposed to resent the growing emphasis upon economics in the curriculum, and the monstrous stride taken by athletics in a college which had once stood for liberal culture. He ridiculed the indiscriminating bestowal of honorary degrees by Harvard and other colleges as well. And he wrote not only of Eliot's troubles with the Catholics but of President Lowell's later attempts to exclude the Jews and negroes from the college. The drive for an enormous endowment which would put the college in the control of capitalists also brought forth satirical comment.

Many of the twentieth century letters read like chapters from Only Yesterday in their accounts of the early automobiles, the moving picture shows (which he occasionally attended with Howells), the radio, and the great vogue for popular literature in books and magazines. He wrote with astonishment of the ~~endowment~~ ^{founding} of a new university in North Carolina in 1926 wondering how it would be possible to find scholars for the faculty in a place so far removed from libraries and museums.

But he did not shut himself off from the new periodicals and books, for he read and commented on the New Republic, the Freeman, the Dial, the Wall St. Journal, the Saturday Evening Post, and Life. To be sure he continued reading the Revue des deux Mondes and Temps, and retained his interest in French literature, but being an omnivorous reader and a man of lively interests, he welcomed the opportunity to hunt for whatever might please him in American literature. His preference in books was for biography and for criticism, and his letters discuss the works of Emil Ludwig, Andre Maurois, Henry Adams, the Letters of Ambassador Page, the Lincoln biographies by Charnwood and by Beveridge, the critical works of Cazamian, Santayana, Croce, Anatole France, Samuel Butler, T.S. Eliot, William Lyon Phelps, Van Wyck Brooks, George F. Moore of Harvard, and others of his contemporaries. As he considered letters the best kind of biography, he turned to some of his old favorites among letter writers and read with rapture the letters of Mme. du Deffand, A. Doudan, Charles Lamb, and others, and he enjoyed a renewal of his enthusiasm for Thackeray and Macaulay and Tennyson.

Perry's letters continue to reflect his life-long interest in music and art, with their comments on the Fenway Palace of Mrs. Jack Gardner, the Peterborough Art colony of Mrs. MacDowell, the work of the Boston Guild of ^{Boston} Artists, and his warm enthusiasm for the productions of Chekov plays by the Moscow Art Theater in Boston in 1923.

But stronger than his hatred of evil politics and his love of good music, good painting, good acting and good books, was Perry's love of good talk and good friends, and his letters bear abundant testimony to his friendships. To be sure, he outlived Henry James, who died in 1916, and William Dean Howells, who died in 1920, but he clung to his old friends, John Morse, Moorfield Storey, Raphael Pumpelly, and James Rhodes, and he readily found new friends among younger men: Van Wyck Brooks, William Lyon Phelps, Edwin Arlington Robinson, and Joseph Grew. He visited Howells in New York and at Kittery Point, and the letters and diaries tell of these visits.

and of their meetings whenever Howells was in Boston. They also tell of the week-end visits of Robinson in Hancock during the summers from 1913 to 1927; and they tell of the regular meetings of the dinner club on the first Friday of each month during the winter. The almost daily exchange of letters with John Morse when they were separated during the summers is an excellent record of the love of both men for good talk.

Perry wrote to Fay in 1887, "I am absurdly anxious that you and John Morse should preserve then [his letters], because they are a sort of journal wh. some day I may turn into a bk. Indeed, Mrs. Py. wishes me to carry out my threats and write one now." Since that date, the volume of letters which have been preserved has swollen to nearly 3,000, reflecting the opinions of ^{one of} the best-read men of his time to the changes in politics, literature, art, and society over a span of nearly seventy years.

PERRY, Vestal W.
High Point, N.C.

Letters and Papers. (1831-937 pieces 1900)

This set gives little information about Vestal W. Perry's family, with the exception that he had a brother Jonathan Perry, and a married sister, Sanira Folger. Perry himself was evidently a small scale farmer, with very little education. Besides farming he operated a whiskey distillery and a country store. He also served as Justice of the Peace.

The set has no particular value. It contains some legal papers, some papers from the United States Internal Revenue, regarding Perry's whiskey distillery, some notes concerning the buying of fertilizer, and some smatterings of information regarding farm conditions, prices etc. in Missouri and Indiana for the years 1886-1886. Many of the papers consist of cancelled notes given by tobacco farmers in order to obtain fertilizer.

1 item added 12-21-60: A letter to Perry from A.J. Folger, husband of Perry's sister Samira (May 16, 1859). Folger discussed the poor economic conditions in Indiana as well as various family matters.

7 items added, 10-25-71: These are primarily letters between friends and various relatives of the Perry family. That family may have been Quaker in faith since one letter, written to Ebenezer Perry on May 31, 1847, is phrased in the Quaker "style," and another letter, written to Vestal W. Perry and dated January, 1857, speaks of a mutual acquaintance who was reared as a Quaker. There is also a phrenological chart of Jonathan Perry that was made in 1856.

2,500 pieces

Miscellaneous bills, deeds, addounts, and correspondence of Presley C. Person (1770-1845); of his son, Thomas A. Person, and of his family; and of Willie Mangum Person (1862-1930), nephew of Thomas A. Person. The earliest papers are largely confined to deeds and copies of wills; and later papers, centering around Presley C. Person, consist generally of letters and documents pertaining to the settlement of his estate with Thomas A. Person as administrator. The bulk of the collection concerns Thomas A. Person and his family including legal papers; numerous letters in the 1840's and 1850's to Theophilus Perry from his father, Levin Perry, written from New Orleans, La., and Harrison Co., Texas; letters during 1860 from Harriet (Person) Perry, wife of Theophilus Perry, in Texas, and during the war years many letters (bulk of the war correspondence) between the two, as well as letters from Jesse H. H. Person (d. 1863) and M. P. Person, Confederate soldiers, concerning military activities and army life. Included also are

Peruvian Collection

This heterogenous collection of manuscripts is primarily from the colonial period of Peru, but there is also material from the 19th century. These papers concern a considerable variety of topics from the economic, social, political, administrative, religious, and literary history of Peru and occasionally of nearby countries. For detailed information about each manuscript see the guide to the collection that is in the Inventory File. The descriptions of each manuscript includes both an English and a Spanish version.

This guide to the collection is the result of extensive recataloging in which, for the first time, considerable attention has been given to analyzing the content of the manuscripts. The descriptions of many of the manuscripts have been enlarged, and, in some cases, author and title information has been changed or refined. Many entries have been added to the card catalog based upon these new descriptions. Copies of these cards have been included in the guide in order to provide additional means of access to the contents of the collection.

Some of these manuscripts, formerly the property of Manuel de Odriozola, the Peruvian literary historian who brought together this collection, are listed in the Cátalogo de la Biblioteca Peruana Propiedad de Dn. Francisco Perez de Velasco (Lima, 1918). Rubén Vargas Ugarte, S. J., describes some in Manuscritos

Peters, Don Preston, Sr. Papers, 1952.
Lynchburg, Campbell Co., Va.

This small collection is the remains of a once very extensive collection originally known as the Don Preston Peters Collection. The latter collection actually consisted of many groups of papers which were amassed over a period of years by the late Dr. Don Preston Peters, Sr., a prominent Lynchburg surgeon and philatelist. The lack of uniformity in the quality of these papers is due partially to the fact that his chief interest was acquiring stamps, not manuscripts. The papers deal mainly with Virginia and Virginians, and particularly with Lynchburg and its inhabitants. Since the papers comprise many individual collections, or additions to collections already housed in this department, they have been treated as such.

The remaining two items are a list of the entire contents of the Peters Collection acquired by Duke University and a clipping from the Lynchburg News, Nov. 9, 1952, which contains an article by Martha Rivers Adams, dealing with William Weaver, the Don Preston Peters Collection, etc.

Don Preston Peters, Sr. was descended from four governors of Va. His father was Elisha Peters (1829-1906), Confederate Col. and Professor of Latin in the Univ. of Va., from 1866 to 1902. See the latter's Latin Case Relations (1885), the bound manuscript volume of a book, later published and widely used, in this department. He married Margaret Sheffey in 1858 and then Mary Sheffey on July 14, 1873.

Peters, Don Preston, Sr.

Don Preston Peters, Sr. was born of the latter union in Marion on July 14, 1877. He attended the University of Va., receiving his B. A. and M. A. in 1899 and his M. D. in 1902. He practiced surgery in Baltimore, Md., from 1911 to 1917. He married Rhett Mencke in Baltimore on Oct. 28, 1911. To this union were born four children: Mary Sheffey; Don Preston, Jr.; John Lyon; and Rhett Preston. He served in the Medical Corps, Army of the U. S. (1917-1919), both in the U. S. and in France, beginning as a 1st lt. and ending as a maj. In 1919 he began to practice surgery in Lynchburg, becoming a well-known man in his field. He contributed articles to medical journals, belonged to various professional and other organizations, and was a Democrat and Presbyterian.

See Historic and Heroic Lynchburg; Rosa F. Yancey, Lynchburg and It's (sic) Neighbors; Who's Who in the South (1927); and Who's Who in American Medicine (1925).

As stated earlier, all items in the large original Don Preston Peters Collection, except the twenty-one items in the present small collection, have been removed from it. They have been processed as follows: some have been catalogued as additions to pre-existing collections; some have been catalogued as new collections; some have been placed, uncatalogued, in various small collections, some pre-existing and some not. Moreover, some of the pre-existing catalogued collections to which additions have been made from the original Don Preston Peters Collection have been recatalogued. Peterson, Elisha A. Papers. 1862-1865.

Springdale, Hamilton Co., Ohio.

This collection contains the letters of Elisha A. Peterson, a private in the 4th Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, Company D, Army of the Cumberland, and his father, Jacob S. Peterson of Springdale, Hamilton Co., Ohio.

E. A. Peterson spent the major part of his three years in the Union Army (1862-1865) serving in Tennessee. In his letters, he discusses his personal experiences, the condition of the Army in general and describes camp life at his various posts in central Tennessee, Georgia, and Alabama. Among the battles that Peterson describes are Murfreesboro (Jan., 1863) and Chattanooga (Sept., 1863).

Peterson served at the staff headquarters under Generals D. S. Stanley and W. S. Rosecrans. He especially liked Rosecrans and felt that U. S. Grant, Rosecrans' successor, would have to prove his ability before he could win the respect of the soldiers who remembered Rosecrans as their leader (Oct. 27, 1863).

Peterson, Elisha A.

On Sept. 24, 1864, Peterson wrote his family telling them of the fall of Atlanta, Sherman's strategy, and the conditions in Atlanta following Sherman's victory.

On Feb. 18, 1865, he wrote from Gravelly Spring, Ala., about the Huston family, a pro-Union family in Lauderdale Co. in north-western Alabama.

Elisha Peterson discussed pro-Southern sympathies in Kentucky, and Jacob Peterson described for his son the activities of the butternuts and copperheads in Ohio. The elder Peterson praised Henry Winter Davis and Gov. Oliver H. P. T. Morton of Indiana for their efforts to defeat the southern sympathizers in the lower Middle West.

In a letter dated June 10, 1863, Elisha Peterson told his family about the punishment given three Union Army offenders, a thief, a mutineer, and a deserter. He also mentioned the impending execution of several Confederate spies, one of whom was a woman.

Jacob Peterson told his son of a conspiracy to release the Confederate prisoners held on Johnson's Island in Sandusky Bay, Ohio. This plot appears to be similar to that of John Yates Beall, but Beall's activities took place in the autumn of 1864 while Peterson's letter is dated Nov. 17, 1863.

The personal letters of John Peterson, N.C. farmer, gunsmith, and Confederate soldier, 1864-65, to his family; of his sister, Rhoda Hawn, from Ironton, Mo., and brother, Daniel, Judge of Probate Court and Supt. of Schools in Fredericktown, Mo. to John Peterson; and of Jacob Peterson, sheep herder in the vicinity of Martindale, Montana, to his sister, Jane Peterson, daughter of John Peterson.

John's letters describe ration hardships and the waning spirit of the common soldier in late 1864. Rhoda tells of ordinary domestic problems involved in pioneering, while Daniel voices his radical opinions, and to an extent, discusses prices and railroad and mining prospects in the territory. Jacob presents a glimpse of the sheep herder's life interspersed by financial loss from speculating in iron and silver mines, 1880's and 1890's.

(Apr. 27, 1842).

Charles Petigru's papers consist of letters from his sister Adele, wife of Robert Francis Withers Allston, and Jane, his brother Tom (Thomas ?), and from two friends in Maryland. These letters are for the most part personal in nature, though a letter of Aug. 12, 1833, contains a good description of White Sulphur Springs, W.Va. The James Louis Petigru and Charles Petigru collections were combined when they were recataloged on this date.

In general this collection contains family letters of ordinary type, though there are two that discuss the Nullification question of S. C. to considerable extent. Those letters dealing with Nullification were written by Jos[eph] H. Pettigrew of S. C. and R. H. Pettigrew of Hibernia[S. The name is spelled Pettigru by the brothers writing from S. C. , but usually in the series of letters it is spelled Pettigrew . It is possible that there is a close connection between these Alabama Pettigrews and the zPettigrwe family of Nf Which Gen. James Johnston Pettigrew was a member. The N. C. family was connected with James Louis Petigru of S. C. and the name Ebenezer was also the name of a N.C. Pettigrew who was a congressman in 1835. It seems a likely assumption that some of the Pettigrew family of Abbeville, S.C. moved to Ala., though no such fact is revealed in the MSS. In fact Ebenezer Pettigrew, the chief character of this collection, seems very likely to have been the founder of the family in Ala. At any rate Eliza Pettigrew of Greensborough, Ala., Ebenezer Pettigrew of Green Co., Ala., and Joseph Pettigrew and R. H. Pettigrew of S.C. were brothers and sisters.

These are mainly family letters of the Petty, Hill, and Stanton families of Virginia, Indiana, and Alabama. The bulk of the correspondence begins in 1860. The families seem to be originally from Virginia but were divided by the time of the Civil War, although they kept in contact throughout. Little of consequence is said in the Civil War letters. After the war's end there are some interesting letters describing the political situation and society in Virginia (1865, October 6) and Texas (1865, October 16). The Reconstruction governor of Texas, Andrew Jackson Hamilton, is also discussed in the letter of October 16, 1865.

In 1892 and 1893 correspondence between Mollie F. Hill of Oak Park, Va., and Annie E. Petty of Culpeper concerns their attempt to gain title to 3,000 acres of land in Texas which they claim belonged to Annie Petty's father, Wesley Hill. Lengthy discussions over

Fauquier County, Virginia. 52 pieces. Sketch

Dr. Robert Eden Peyton (Feb. 9, 1804 - July 15, 1872) was born in Fauquier Co., Va., the son of Dr. Chandler Peyton and Elizabeth Brown (Scott) Peyton. He graduated in medicine from the University of Penna. in 1826 and practiced medicine until his death, in both Loudon and Fauquier Counties, Va. He lived at "Gordonsdale", an estate which had long been in possession of his maternal ancestors until 1868, when he sold it to General Benjamin Huger. He then built "Yelverton" a few miles from "Gordonsdale."

PEYTON, Robert Eden. Sketch. (2)

On April 18, 1833, Peyton married Mannelta Lee Jones, the daughter of General Walter Jones of Washington, D.C. Of this union six children were born: the oldest dying as an infant; Robert Eden; Edward Marshall; Annie Lee; Eliza Gordon Scott; and Virginia.

Dr. Robert Peyton was a very pious man, being confirmed by Bishop Meade and later being appointed as lay reader in the church in Fauquier Co., Va., and representing his parish, Piedmont, at conventions. He was an advocate of temperance and also wrote many articles published in the medical journals of his day.

The papers of this collection are largely family letters between the Peyton family and Mrs Peyton's relatives, the Hones family. Mrs. Peyton's sister, Rosina, married Rev. Birmingham, England. 6 items & 1 vol. Sketch

The only significant part of this collection is the diary. It is charmingly and amusingly written, containing excellent descriptions of all the author sees. Phelps, an old "Charterhouse Man" (an English Public School) crosses the North Atlantic in July, 1892. He stops at Quebec and then goes on by ship to Montreal; from there by train to Owen Sound, stopping for several days at Toronto. He takes a lake steamer from Owen Sound, crossing Lakes Huron and Superior to Port Arthur. There he boards a train for Winnipeg, where he stayed for some days, being pleasantly entertained by people of prominence to whom he has letters of introduction.

Phelps often mentions the sports he sees: particularly tennis, but cricket, track, lacrosse, polo, horse racing, hunting, and baseball are also mentioned. He graphically describes Bishop's Court, the "oldest house in Manitoba." He then takes a train for Ducks Station, stopping on the way for a night at Banff Hot Springs. Phelps gives wonderful descriptions of the Rocky Mountains as he sees them in his travels.

He gives an amusing account of his arrival at Ducks Station and the night spent in a "frontier hotel," and his wagon trip to Warwick Ranch at Grande Prairie. He stays at the ranch about a month, spending the time riding and hunting. His descriptions of ranch life and hunting trips are excellent.

He goes by train to Vancouver. As there is a smallpox epidemic at Victoria, all train passengers have to give proof of recent vac-ination or be vaccinated on the train. Phelps stops at Vancouver for a few days, and then goes by paddle steamer to Victoria, where he stays for several weeks. Phelps has his usual letters of introduction, and is accepted and entertained by local society. He makes friends with a well-educated Chinaman, and becomes very familiar with Victoria's "Chinatown."

Phelps starts his eastward trip by visiting New Westminster, which he describes beautifully. The diary ends here, but there are several inserted sheets which give the philbrick was an obscure Savannah versifier, probably feminine. The verses, some of them written when the author was quite young, are fairly good when one considers that the writer was but twelve or fourteen years old. There was little improvement with age, however, and the adult work is full of superficial sweetness and prettiness, but none of it reveals any depth of thought.

Anna Jones (Dunn) Phillips was the widow of Thomas Walley Phillips (1797-1859). According to Joseph Palmer's Necrology of Alumni of Harvard College, 1851-52 to 1862-63, he graduated from Harvard in 1814, practised law very successfully in Boston for about fourteen years, and then became clerk of the Municipal Court. He had several sisters and brothers, and one of his brothers was the noted orator and reformer

Phillips, Anna Jones (Dunn)

Wendell Phillips.

The diary begins on Jan. 1, 1861, and ends on Dec. 31 of that year with Mrs. Phillips in Brooklyn, New York, visiting friends and relatives. It contains 62 pages of diary entries and 14 pages of financial accounts and entries.

There is an entry for every day of that year, but, except for a number of comments about the excitement accompanying the outbreak of the Civil War, the volunteering of troops, mob activity attributed to citizens of Baltimore that included destroying portions of the railroad between that city and Philadelphia and between Baltimore and Washington, the First Battle of Manassas, and the capture of Mason and Slidell and their imprisonment in Fort Warren in Boston Harbor, there is little in the diary other than a consistent description of the weather, her health, the health of relatives and other acquaintances, deaths among her acquaintances, her church attendance, her son Samuel, and her frequent visiting. She owned a summer home at Nahant, but it appears that she boarded when she was living in Boston in the winter of 1861. She says little about her domestic activities. Numerous people, including a number of ministers, are mentioned in the diary.

A few times Mrs. Phillips mentions the Missionary Society of St. Paul's Episcopal Church of which she was a member, and also that church's Association for the Relief of the Industrious Poor, of which she was also a member. She did some sewing and knitting for the soldiers, but little is said about that. When her son wanted to take a commission in a volunteer regiment she said that it was not his duty to enlist and that she could not give her consent. According to the Necrology of Alumni of Harvard he graduated from there in 1861 and in March, 1862, offered his services to the Educational Commission to work with the blacks at Port Royal, S.C. Before he had served as superintendent there for one year he became ill and died on Dec. 5, 1862, at Henry Myer Phillips (1811-1874) was born in Philadelphia and remained there except for his one term in Congress (1857-1859). He was a lawyer and civic leader in his native city.

On Nov. 17, 1852, Phillips wrote to John Hile Martin concerning a client seeking recompense for goods damaged on two ships.

Chiefly letters about personal affairs and the Civil War in Virginia, North Carolina, and Georgia.

A letter of August 28, 1861, is by Levi L. Phillips, a Confederate Soldier, in Norfolk, Virginia, (of the 2nd Regt. of N. C. Inf. Vols.) who discusses U.S. Navy blockading operations, President Abraham Lincoln, U.S. Gen. John Ellis Wool (1789-1869), and C. S. Gen. John Bankhead Magruder (1810-1871). He expresses confidence

Edmund Mc. Phillips, a Confederate soldier stationed in Wilmington, N. C., writes on April 11, 1862, to his father, Jesse Phillips, about U.S. casualties and prisoners and the attempt to blockade the port.

Other subjects discussed include commodity prices in Georgia (1856); desertion (1863); the Atlanta Campaign (1864); the Siege of Petersburg (1864-1865); the 31st Regt. of N. C. Inf. Vols; and C.S. Army camp life, casualties, food, and sickness.

These items all consist of bills except two letters and a note, in which a small loan is requested. The first letter was written on Sept. 18, 1873 by attorney John Young Kilpatrick of Camden, Ala., to Dr. Phillips. He speaks of the hard times and the destitution of many Negroes. The second letter is from attorney Edward C. Jones of Selma, announcing his candidacy for the office of state senator for Dallas County.

The volume is a commonplace book, running from 1845 to 1867, in which Dr. Phillips recorded accounts, descriptions of drugs, and remedies.

Spring was lovely in Selma until Wilson's Raiders (U. S.) defeated the few Confederate defenders and captured the city on Sunday afternoon, April 2, 1865. The Raiders were composed at least in part, of released convicts. C. S. Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest is mentioned, but he does not appear on the scene to prevent the Yankee atrocities. A refugee from New Orleans, a venerable old gentleman, was hanged to a bedpost without his body's being rescued from the flames. The women and children of Selma were unprotected from the vandals.

Most of the story focuses upon the McIlwain family. Miss Sarah Ellen McIlwain's father had to flee to Perry Co. to keep from being killed. A U. S. Army Capt. and some of his men invaded the McIlwain home and ransacked it looking for gold, silver, and food. Sarah told him that her mother had given all the meat in the smokehouse to some Confederate Soldiers the day before. The Capt. threatened to burn the gin house and the regular house and to kill Mrs. McIlwain. She gave him two pieces of silver. He made a sarcastic remark about Sarah and then, surprisingly, asked her mother to pray for him.

Mrs. McIlwain did so, whereupon he apologized and departed, but, did not return the money.

For a week the Raiders depredated Selma. One Negro was robbed. The McIlwain's slaves were devoted to them throughout.

Confederate casualties are mentioned.

Sketch

William Horace Phillips was the son of Charles M. Phillips and Sarah G. (Crowder) Phillips. Charles Phillips was an overseer, apparently well established in his occupation. The son, William H. was about to enter the same business when the Civil War began. There was a younger son, "Morty," who was about twelve years old in 1861. Sarah Phillips was apparently illiterate but the son William gave evidence of having received a reasonable amount of education, while "Morty" apparently had little inclination for school.

William H. Phillips apparently volunteered, and served the Confederacy throughout the war, so far as the letters reveal, without being wounded, and with only one minor illness. The letters do not reveal just how much fighting he actually saw, but give a general idea of his movements. He was first stationed near Williamsburg, Va. and later moved down to the very end of the Peninsula. In the spring and summer of 1862 he participated in the defense of Richmond; in 1863 he marched to Gettysburg and saw action on July 3; in 1864 he was stationed between Petersburg and Richmond and remained in that vicinity until the close of the war.

On the whole, Phillips had a better idea of the trend of events during the war, than did the average private. He apparently overstayed his leave at home on one occasion, for which he spent ~~two~~ weeks in the guard house. Henceforth his family discouraged such procedure.

Phillips' chief interest in life was food, so that his letters home were more concerned with what he had to eat and his prospects of getting more, than with any other subject. The letters reveal the comparatively large amounts of food furnished soldiers from their homes, as well as the equally large provision of clothing from the same source, which was the frequent concern of many soldiers. The letters also contain comment on marches, camp life, the general situation in the Confederacy, the results of battles, and desertion. On the whole, the collection is slightly better than the average correspondence of confederate soldiers.

In addition to the letters there are thirteen pieces containing copies of ballads and original poems of W. H. Phillips. They chiefly show that Phillips could not write poetry.

13 items added 9-6-51. The contents of these letters from Phillips to his parents are largely covered in the original sketch. One letter does reveal that in Oct, 1863 he was in camp near Tarboro, N. C.

These two albums entitled "Photographs of War Scenes" contain 100 photographs from Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, Georgia, and Florida, mostly scenes at former Civil War battlefields. Georgia (28-35), and St. Augustine, Florida (36-42). The views may be either of those places or of locations in their environs.

The albums appear to be a compilation of photographs taken by different people at different times. The style and size of the photographs vary. Some pictures in Album II are labeled in print as the work of the Centennial Photographic Co. and were copyrighted in 1876. The proprietors of this company were Edward Livingston Wilson (1838-1903) and Washington

Irving Lincoln Adams (b. 1865) both of whom published numerous books about photography. Other photographs in the albums might be their work. There are views of at least two monuments erected and dated in the 1870's (I, 21, 34). Most of the photographs are albumen prints, but there are also a small number of emulsion-paper prints (Album II, 1-6, for examples). Emulsion-paper prints were not in common use until about 1888. The location labels for the photographs were all handwritten by the same person.

Photographs of War Scenes

These volumes were formerly cataloged as C.S.A. Albums I & II, 1876(?).

The emulsion-paper prints noted above are labeled with the same handwriting as the other prints. The emulsion-paper prints date about 1888 at the earliest. These facts indicate that the photographs were labeled after 1888, and the album may well have been compiled at the same time as the photographs were labeled.

Piatt, William M. Papers, 1843 (1845-1883)
1904. Tunkhannock, Wyoming Co., and Harrisburg, Dauphin Co., Pa.

William M. Piatt, to whom the letters in this collection are addressed, was a lawyer of Tunkhannock, Pennsylvania, and a member of the Pennsylvania legislature in the 1850's, holding the office of Speaker of the Senate for a term. The letters indicate that he was an enthusiastic member of the Democratic Party and, aside from sincere personal interest in temperance legislation, appears to be a politician primarily concerned with the interests of his party and his friends.

Piatt, William M.

The collection begins with a letter of Oct. 13, 1845, referring to the North Branch Canal. A. Beaumont on Feb. 3, 1850 writes thanking Piatt for helping stop a rumor about the canal started by one of General Cameron's friends. A letter from William Bridle of Jan. 22, 1853, in which he says that he thinks Maj. Gen. Robert Patterson will be Secretary of War, also mentions the Canal and Towanda Bridge. ~~In Jan. and Mar. 1855~~ In January and March, 1855 petitions from the Towanda Bridge Company to the Senate and House of Representatives of Pennsylvania explain much of the controversy over the canal and the need for the bridge to be raised at State expense. In April 1855 a letter opposes a bill to give Mr. Moffit possession of the North Branch Canal and several letters refer to the price of coal and how it will be lowered by using canal transportation. The final mention of the canal is a denouncement of Moffitt's management of the canal written by Elhanan Smith from Tunkhannock on February 15, 1856.

Platt, William M.

Piatt, William M.

From 1845 to 1847 the letters are personal or refer to private legal affairs.

Benjamin S. Dartt of Troy, Pa. January 18, 1852, congratulating Piatt on his appointment to the State Temperance Convention, says that three-fourths of his constituents favor a Prohibitory Liquor Law. The liquor law is mentioned in a letter from T. M. Atherton of Huntsville in January 1854, and May 18, 1855 a letter from Nathaniel Borrodail Browne of Phila. expresses pleasure at passage of the temperance bill which he rewrote. In this letter he mentions the high position Platt holds in the party and his disapproval of holding the Democratic Convention in October. A letter of Feb. 6, 1856 from George Atkinson says he heard the liquor law was repealed by the House and in the same letter asks how former governor Bigler stands on the Nebraska question. In the same month Dr. N. Wills of Sterlingville hopes at least the Sunday prohibition, & porhibition to minors and habitual drunkards will be kept. The other side of the question appears in a letter of March 11, 1856 from E. N. Baron,

Platt, William M.

Piatt, William M.

tavern keeper, objecting to the Liquor License Bill because it prevents his minor sons from helping him in his business. In an exchange of letters this same month with the Rev. John Chambers of Philadelphia, Piatt urges Chambers to publish his letters to members of the legislature relative to temperance. A letter from the Collector's Office, U. S. Internal Revenue, Towanda, Pa., March 6, 1863, refers to liquor licensing and finally the temperance bill is mentioned in a letter from P. W. Osterhouse, Feb. 14, 1870, in which he also discusses

Piatt, William M.

the Law Association.

Letters of 1852 refer to the meeting time of courts in Luzerne and Bradford counties, the State Road Bill, private legal cases, and a Board of Missions in Philadelphia. In 1853 Charles Rollin Buckalew says he would be gratified at Piatt's political success but is not unfriendly to Mr. Sanderson or Mr. Blanding, and A. Dietrick mentions that he received unanimous nomination for Senator.

Jan. 1854 starts with discourses on politics from A. Hine of Tunkhannock and S. S. Winchester of Wilkes-Barre. The roads laws in Pa., especially as they relate to Wyoming County, are the subject of a letter from A. C. Case, and the scarcity of cash and dullness of business in Tunkhannock is mentioned by George Tutton. Thomas S. Fernon writes from the Office of the North Penna. R. R. Co. in Philadelphia asking that the Towanda and Franklin R. R. Supplement be hurried, and U. Marcus gives the reasons for the amendment to the Towanda and Franklin R. R. In Feb. A. Canal interests; John Brooke of Falls, Wyoming County, expresses political concern over the newspaper to be published called the North Branch Democrat, and the political efforts of its backers and their threats to expose the high cost of canal building; and Charles F. Welles of Wyoming gives details of the degrees of ascent on various sections of the state road in connection with the Graduation Law.

A chatty personal letter from Elhanon Smith of March 6, 1855 says that everyone is talking about the panic and R. R. Little writes a few days later relative to the question of dividing his judicial district. In April Benjamin Harris Brewster sent a bill for professional service, and in November William Bigler wrote regarding his possible election to the U. S. Senate, hoping his party would support him after his awful defeat the previous fall at the hands of the Know-Nothings. In Nov. & Dec. of this year there are several letters requesting the job as clerk of the State Senate.

Piatt, William M.

A letter covering a petition supporting Bigler for the State Senate appears in Jan. 1856, and a query about Bigler's position on the slavery question arrives from R. R. Little. Several people write congratulating Piatt as Speaker of the Senate. Railroad business is discussed this same month in letters by Simon Cameron; William Muhlenberg Hiestler, asking support for the Reading and Lehigh R. R. bill; and by Michael Meylert of Scranton, relative to the supplement requested for the Lackawanna R. R. The need for a bill to borrow money

Piatt, William M.

to expand the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad is fully explained in a printed letter sent to the members of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives in February 1856. On Feb. 5, John Nesbitt Conyngham explains the need for larger appropriation for the Institute for the Deaf and Dumb in Philadelphia. A proposed bank bill is mentioned Feb. 7 in a letter from George Sanderson; a few days later William Brindle denounces this "absurd bill to give certain Banks power over the public monies"; and on March 13, R. W. Ross of Philadelphia wants Jordan's bill killed as its effect will be to pile up money in the Bank of Penna. to the exclusion of other banks.

On the 19th of February 1856, F. Smith wrote opposing a bill to purchase a county farm and erect a county poor house for Bradford County. It is favored in an April letter of H. L. Scott. A letter sent from Washington, March 12, by James Hepburn Campbell refers to R. R. Little and a judgeship. icularly to the "princely preaching of Mr. Mitchel;" as do several letters during the coming month. On the 13th Chester Thomas in a letter concerning an election says he prefers Platt as he favors the division of Bucks County

R. H. Small announced publication of the Forum by David Paul Brown; and James McClure wrote his objections to powers assumed by the Philadelphia City councils to designate school funds, e. g., reducing teachers' salaries so that some are due only $250 per annum and that is in arrears. A few days later Platt wrote to

Piatt, William M.

J. Campbell favoring appointment of D. A. Yarrington to carry mail to San Francisco and back. Several letters in March from J. Morley Jr. of Morrisville request passage of his bill for divorce. An ambiguous letter from William Brindle March 21, urging young men to break loose from the lead of old and selfish politicians, refers to Bigler and Buckalew. Other March correspondence includes a discussion of the Democratic Party from Piatt, opposition of Allan M. Kearns to transferring V. E. Piolett's case against him to the court of another county,

Platt, William M.

and John Jessup's comments on the Montrose and Hartford Plank Road.

April 9th, Hickling, Swan and Brown of Boston wrote praising Dr. Worcester's dictionary, R. R. Little commented on the coming election, and William Elnell wrote about an Insurance Co. charter. April also brought a letter from Charles Wesley Carrigan concerning a bill for the preservation of records of courts. Simon Cameron wrote on December 8 about his election to the U. S. Senate.

On January 9, 1857, John Cresswell revealed details of the caucus to choose a Senator, and on October 2 he admits that he wishes to be the next Speaker. Political concerns also dominate the correspondence of 1858 and 1859. One exception is a letter of May 1859 from George Sanderson in which he says the stock of N. Y. and Penna. Coal is worth nothing.

Piatt, William M.

National politics made an appearance in 1860 when George J. Bolton, mentioning the great interest in the Charleston Convention, presumes that Douglas' friends predominate, and gives his opinion of Southern Democrats and their indulgence by Buchanan. On April 29, 1861 soon after he became Secretary of War under Lincoln, Simon Cameron wrote concerning applications for a position under discussion. August 11, 1862, M. C. Dunnier asked exemption from the draft as he was an engineer in charge of lighthouses, and on September 2 of that year W. Patton hopes that an alignment of Democrats and Whigs against Republicans in his congressional district will defeat Wilmot and the abolitionists. An interesting note from J. M. Quiggle of Philadelphia, written Feb. 3, 1863, says it is difficult^{to} sell property as people of Phila. and N. Y. believe that within 90 days this government will be ended.

Platt, William M.

J. W. Wooding of San Francisco, February 20, 1864, recounting his trip through Panama, described the natives and scenery and goes on to mention his voyage aboard the steamer Constitution. At the time of writing he was a teacher in the city college of San Francisco. In March 1864 Charles John Biddle mentioned that the time and place of the State Convention was announced in the newspaper, The Age, and on July 23 a letter refers to resumption of the draft. Other letters of 1864-65 are primarily concerned with private legal cases.

The rapid advance of railroads is indicated in a letter of January 1867 from Sioux City, Iowa, suggesting that Piatt wait a couple of years to sell his land in the West as the arrival of railroads will increase its value. Praise for a college at Georgetown, D. C., is given in a letter from Samual J. Randall in April of that year. A legal claim mentioned on Nov. 25, 1867, concerns a boy who was taken into the army on the promise to pay his mother $300.

Piatt, William M.

Several letters from Samuel J. Randall in 1868 are concerned with political patronage, and in May of that year William A. Wallace mentions the Registry Law.

Political difficulties of the Democratic Party in Pennsylvania are indicated in a letter of May 30, 1869 from Charles W. Carrigan in which he discusses how to save the state from the "Infernal Radicals." In 1870 and 1871 several letters are concerned with attempts to find a position for Piatt's son, including one from Francis Jordan, Secretary of the Commonwealth. The demand for railroad passes appears in several letters, including one of May 25, 1872 from D. C. Kitchen, calling attention to an article he wrote and bluntly saying that he could be of further use to the railroads.

The latter half of 1872 is filled with correspondence about the State Constitutional Convention and an alliance between Democrats and Liberal Republicans to beat the Radical candidates, e. g., a letter from Les Miller, August 24, and one from S. W. Buck on December 12. Samuel Randall wrote an interesting letter on November 30, bewailing the tragic death of Horace Greeley. On April 15, 1873, R. A. Lamberton of Harrisburg wrote about changes in Harrisburg's wards, and on June 30, S. W. Buck requested the job as secretary of the State Committee at the Convention.

Platt, William M.

John B. Linn wrote in 1878 that the commissioners of Wyoming County never procured the standard weights and measures. A letter from John J. Metzger of December 1881 refers to the case of the Lycoming Fire Insurance Co.

Undated letters in the collection include

Platt, William M.

24

one from C. B. Chase, inquiring about Wilmot and Anti-Slavery restrictions, a reference to a petition for good schools by E. Geiger, and a request for publication of public acts.

The few bills and receipts are concerned with legal work.

Legal papers include two petitions, one from Bradford County and one from Columbia County, objecting to taxation and other legal arrangements for public schools.

Piatt, William M.

19 items added, 2-23-62. The letters are political in nature, reflecting William M. Piatt's influence as head of the Democratic Party in Wyoming County, Pa. On May 10, 1855, Piatt is congratulated upon becoming Speaker of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives. This addition refers to Democratic patronage, candidates and elections. Judge David Wilmot figures in letters of April 2, 1852, and March 9, 1861. A brief glimpse is given of Pa. Democrats during Republican triumphs of the Civil War and Reconstruction periods. On June

Piatt, William M.

21, 1867, James Harding writes from California, giving a description of Democratic politics in that state and of the race between Henry Huntley Haight and George C. Gorham for the governorship. Clippings describe the North Branch [Susquehanna River] Canal, April 25, 1855, and an iron mine development in Granville Co., N. C., in 1925. Among the prominent political correspondents, 1852-1872, are William Bigler, Richard Brodhead, Charles Rollin Buckalew, Paul Leidy, William Wallace, and Hendrick Bradley Wright.

Pickard, Samuel Thomas. Papers. Amesbury,
Essex County, Massachusetts

Samuel Thomas Pickard (1828-1915) was a biographer, printer, editor, and author. Although born in Rowley, Massachusetts, he spent his youth in Auburn, Maine, and attended the Lewiston Falls Academy. After learning the printer's trade, he became associated with the publication of a humorous paper, the Carpet Bag, in Boston. In 1853 he joined E. P. Weston in publishing the Eclectic, which two years later merged with the Portland Transcript.

Pickard, Samuel Thomas

Pickard was one of the editors and part-owner of this paper for almost forty years. His wife was Elizabeth Hussey Whittier, a niece of John Greenleaf Whittier. The two men became close friends, and when Whittier died, Pickard became his biographer and literary executor. As a result, he published Life and Letters of John Greenleaf Whittier, Whittier as a Politician, and Whittier-Land, a Handbook of North Essex. Pickard spent his later years in Boston and Amesbury, Massachusetts, where he died.

The letter, dated December 11, 1905, from Pickard to Homer[?] Norris, Jr. was laid in a copy of Whittier-Land. Pickard discussed the many autograph letters he had from authors and public men, and offered to send some of them to Norris on approval.

PICKEL, Adam H.

Letters, 1859-1866. Mont Clare near Phoenixville, Pa.

Sketch

This collection is chiefly valuable for the letters of the Pickel family. It also contains letters of Phillip Fries, J.S. Hallowell and John Rigg, all apparently of the vicinity of Philadelphia, but their connection with the Pickel family is not apparent. Fries, Hallowell and Rigg were all Union soldiers as was Pickel. Fries wrote from a vessel engaged in the seige of New Orleans and Vicksburg.

The Pickel family seems to have consisted of the father and mother, Adam and Sarah Pickel and three children, Adam H., J.W. and Mary Ann(Pickel) Christy. Adam H. served in the U.S. army for the duration of the Civil War. The other members of the family remained at Mont Clare, a small village near Phoenixville, Pa. (in the vicinity of Norristown.) Adam H. Pickel also had a wife and two daughters, Sallie and Mary.

The bulk of the correspondence in the set was written by Adam, Sarah and Adam H. Pickel. Sarah Pickel's correspondence may be dismissed as a constant evangelical exhortation directed at her son, Adam H., whom she feared would be contaminated by army life.

Adam H. Pickel wrote of his travels and campaigns from Fort Lyon (apparently in what later became W.Va.) to the battles in and around Fredericksburg, Va. He was a close observer, and many of his letters are important for comments on the refreshment saloons, condition of the barracks, type of food and the lack of veracity in news paper reports of federal engagements. In a letter dated Sept, 7, 1862, he refers to the fact that federal soldiers sometimes died from eating poisoned pies sold on the streets of Baltimore. He was encamped near Arlington and later at Falmouth, Va. from which place he marched to take part in the battle of Fredericksburg.

For the reflection of conditions in eastern Pennsylvania during the war, the letters of Adam Pickel are especially valuable. Adam was a democrat who mistrusted the zealous methods of the abolitionists and felt that Abraham Lincoln was a tricky politician. He wrote his son to know whether there was a "secret society" in the army, and later, Feb. 8, 1863, he described a Copperhead meeting at West Chester, Pa. His sympathy for Clement L. Vallandigham was marked, and he gave a detailed account of Vallandigham's trial and various sentences. He refers to the foolish program of spending the nation's resources for the "Sweet Cented Negro." In line with Adam Pickel's view of the Negro question, it is interesting to note his wife's account of the Irish laborers of Norristown and Reading.

Although these letters contain certain consistent grammatical errors, they are, strangely enough, written with the resources of an ample vocabulary.

Pickens, Andrew. Papers. Pendleton, Anderson
Co., South Carolina

Andrew Pickens, a South Carolina planter and businessman, achieved fame for his successful leadership of the state troops who defeated the Loyalists in northern South Carolina and Georgia during the Revolution. He was also instrumental in the patriot victories at the Battles of Cowpens and Augusta.

Of the two items comprising this collection, the earlier one is a letter of June 5, 1781, concerning supplies for troops under General Pickens.

In a letter dated Jan. 12, 1803, Virgil Maxcy wrote to Andrew Pickens, Jr. about his personal affairs. He praised Beaufort, S. C., as one of the most attractive towns in the state.

Pickens, Andrew (1779-1838). Papers.
Pendleton, Anderson Co., S.C., and Dallas Co.,

Andrew Pickens (1779-1838), South Carolina politician and planter, served as governor of the state during 1816-1818. He was the son of the Revolutionary War hero Andrew Pickens (1739-1817) and the second cousin of John C. Calhoun and the first cousin of Mrs. Calhoun. In 1819 he moved to Alabama where he had a plantation on the Alabama River in Dallas County.

Pickens, Andrew (1779-1838)

A letter written from Charleston, S. C., on May 9, 1801, by George Bowie to Andrew Pickens, who was in Providence, R. I., tells of his trip to Charleston and plan to go on to St. Johns and St. Thomas islands before returning home. He says there is no news from Pendleton or Abbeville worth reporting. He does mention the recent marriage of a Mrs. Maxwell to a Mr. Caruth of Greenville. He includes greetings from John Ewing Colhoun and his wife, says Mr. Colhoun wishes to hear from him and that he has been appointed to the United States Senate. Colhoun was Pickens' uncle. (According to Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography, John Ewing Colhoun served in the Senate from Dec. 11, 1801, until his death on Nov. 26, 1802.)

A memorandum of agreement of Oct. 31, 1806, between Andrew Pickens and David Files covers Pickens' loan of $4000 to Files to be used for five years in establishing and operating a store in Jackson County, Georgia, the interest Pickens would have in any profits from the business, and the nature of the settlement they were to make in 1811. There are a few financial papers relative to the operation of Pickens' plantation in Alabama after he moved there. A mortgage bond issued in Edgefield District, S. C., is for money owed by Daniel Bird to Dr. William Brazier.

The volume is an eighty-one-page Agricultural Memorandum Book Pickens kept from Jan. 22, 1822, to May 29, 1826. It begins by describing his clearing land for cotton. By March 20 more than

100 acres had been cleared for planting. Land was then cleared for planting corn, which was planted in "river lands" on March 28. He planted Red River and Mexican cotton seeds as an experiment to see which variety would be better. The continuing development and operation of the plantation in Dallas County on the Alabama River is described. He planted a great variety of crops and vegetables, and established an orchard. He mentions the types of seeds he is planting and the varieties of fruit trees he is setting out. He records the vicissitudes his plantings suffer from too much rain or drought and flooding of his crops.

At the end of the Memorandum Book there are several pages of accounts. On Feb. 23, 1823, he recorded the weight each of ten bales of cotton that he was sending by boat to Mobile. He mentions spinning and weaving for clothing for his slaves, and the number of hogs killed in December, 1822, and January, 1823. On Sept. 23, 1823, he recorded having "Clive cut 7 pairs negro shoes" for the seven slaves he names. Hannibal, whom he hired to one Huddleston for $10.00 per month between June 15 and Oct. 28, 1824, is not named as one of the seven slaves.

Pickens' plantation was close enough to Cahaba that he could work in the fields and then go there on the same day "in a plank canoe." Cahaba was the first capital of the state of Alabama, 1818-1825. Pickens' comments on his visit to Cahaba during April 24-25, 1822 (pp. 7-9) contain the only known reference to the flooding of the state capitol while the state government was located there.

Pickens, Cornelius Miller. Papers, 1892-1921.
Charlotte, Mecklenburg Co., and Morganton, Burke Co., N. C.

The journal of 1921 is for a trip which the Rev. C. M. Pickens took with a party to southern Europe, the Holy Land, and northern Africa in the summer of 1921. Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, later of the faculty of Duke University, was also in the party. Pickens records a description of much that he saw and some of the stories he heard, but he makes few observations about social and economic conditions and none about political matters.

2 items and 2 vols. added, 10-12-60. The Rev. Cornelius Miller Pickens (1867-1951), a Methodist minister and father of Marshall I. Pickens, was a member of the Holston and Western N. C. Conferences from 1892 until his death.

The first of the two items in this collection is a local preacher's license, dated Sept. 3, 1892, authorizing Pickens to preach the Gospel, according to the rules of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Pickens, Cornelius Miller

The second item, dated Oct. 28, 1894, and signed by Bishop John Cowper Granbery of the same church, appoints Pickens a deacon in the Holston Conference.

There are two copies of Pickens' diary (1892-1901), the original and a typed copy. Page references in this sketch are to the typed copy.

For the most part, this diary discusses personal, social, and ecclesiastical affairs. Much is said about preachers and preaching in N. C., Va., and Tenn.

Pickens, Cornelius Miller

Prohibition and related questions are sometimes discussed, e.g., p. 10. So are Methodist conferences, e.g., p. 12.

On July 5, 1892, Pickens writes that Polk County, N. C. has 17 government distilleries, and that his talk on the whiskey question created some sensation., p. 8.

In Oct. Bishop Oscar Penn Fitzgerald and a Methodist conference are discussed, pp. 18-19. See also p. 62.

In Jan., 1893, Bishop Joice and the Epworth League are mentioned, p. 25. See also pp. 31

President Grover Cleveland is discussed on Mar. 4, 1893, p. 26

The Chicago International Fair (World's Columbian Exposition) is discussed by Pickens in Sept. and Oct., pp. 28-29. See also p. 30.

The Vanderbilt mansion near Asheville, N. C., is discussed on Dec. 13, 1895, p. 46.

Bishop Eugene Russell Hendrix and a missionary meeting are discussed on Apr. 7, 1896, pp. 47-48.

The Bishop was also at at Tenn. Epworth

Pickens (1805-1869) was born in Colleton District, S.C., educated at the universities of Ga. and S.C., studied law, entered politics as a strong State Rights man, served in the legislature and U.S. Congress, supported Nullification and the secession movement of 1850 but thereafter became more conservative, favored the National Democracy and Buchanan's administration, ~~under which he was governor of S.C.~~ ~~XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX~~ As governor his power was largely usurped by an executive council. After 1862 he took small part in public affairs.

The collection contains a great deal of valuable material, chiefly on S.C. and national politics. It is especially useful for the opening of the Civil War. There are letters from many persons of prominence together with 76 items of Pickens himself.

There is also a list of the graduates of the Citadel, Jan. 4, 1861.

Pickens, Francis W.

1 item added, 8-24-63: Letter of Nov. 15, 1860, from John B. Floyd, Secretary of War, to Pickens relative to the distribution of Instruction for Field Artillery, which had just been published and was intended for the militia of the various states.

1 item added, 9-26-58: A letter of Feb. 3, 1836, by Pickens, who asked J. L. Edwards about possible changes in the pension law of 1832.
